Manager of the Gazette.

The New York republicans will send an unbalanced delegation to Chicago. Ex-Senator Hiscock and Chauncey M. Depew will be on hand if the lightning should strike in their direction.

The Emperor Dom Pedro of Brazil, is seriously ill and his recovery is considered doubtful. He has been a good ruler and has done much to develop the resources of his empire and elevate the character of his subjects.

There is some evidence that the question of civil service reform will be injected in time for it to be an issue in the coming campaign. How pleasant it would be to the democrats if that question could be allowed to remain in a grave of oblivion.

Belva Lockwood takes advantage of every leap year to propose herself for the presidency. Her last election has apparently had no effect in limiting her enthusiasm. She is particularly strong in Texas, where she polled her largest vote four years ago. This fact should not discourage the republicans, for Texas has a democratic majority of about 100,000 which they would like to have reduced even by Belva.

The injurious effects of boss rule were made apparent in the proceedings of the Virginia republican convention where ex-Senator Mahone attempted to enforce the unit rule. With a united party the state could be made republican, but under the present Mahone regime republican success is well nigh impossible. The party cannot afford to permit itself to be made the tool of designing politicians. The republican party cannot feel proud of Mr. Mahone or of his record. Fortunately for the party it has few such men. The more boss rule exists in the party the more Mugwumps will there be.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is an ardent supporter of General Gresham and asserts that he is the strongest candidate. It says: "General Gresham's entrance into the list of presidential aspirants has wonderfully simplified the political situation. Every intelligent, well informed person in the country knows that Gresham, if made the standard-bearer of the party could carry every state carried by the republicans in 1884, with Indiana in addition. We do not know any other republican of which this can be said with confidence. With Gresham available for the head of the ticket the republicans task is simply to find a suitable man for the second place. A man should be selected for the vice presidency with especial reference to his ability to carry some one of all of the three eastern doubtful states. Seth Low, Frank Hiscock or Levi P. Morton could win over New York from the democracy. William Walter Phelps could carry New Jersey for the party while Joseph R. Hawley could make Connecticut a reliably republican state."

The advocates of the Mills tariff bill think that it will pass the house substantially in its present shape by a small majority. The opposition to the bill among the democrats is not so pronounced as was first expected. The principal objection to the bill by the protective democrats is in regard to the wool clause. In order to pass the bill, Mr. Mills will probably make some concessions to the tariff wing of his party. The democrats in the house seem to be awakening to the fact that the president has thrown upon them the responsibility of shaping the tariff policy of the party. His position has been clearly stated and defined. It now remains for the party to indorse his tariff views if it proposes to renominate him. He virtually demands that they shall adopt his policy or else repudiate him. The former will likely be the course pursued. The Mills bill cannot pass the senate in its present form, and there is little prospect of its being enacted into a law. The democratic party has declared itself time and again in favor of tariff revision, but its sincerity may well be doubted if the president's policy is not endorsed by the passage of the bill in the house. The party for the first time in several years finds itself compelled to assume a position on a question forced upon it by a democratic president. The one man power seems to be quite strong in the democratic party, though it must be confessed that the party has badly needed a guiding spirit for some time. It has not shown itself able to manage its own affairs.

Mr. Clark is making a selection of 100,000 acres of state land in lieu of land lost to the state in the late Ute land reservation. WASHINGTON'S FAVORITE SWORD.

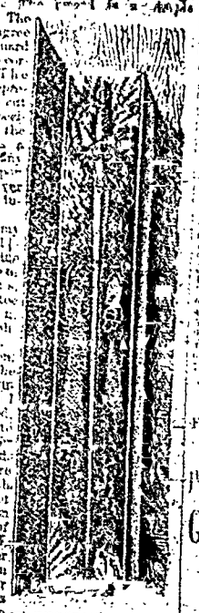
The Relic Which Gen. Washington's Great Niece Offers to Longfellow.

[Special Correspondence.]

BALTIMORE, May 10. I have today held in my hand the sword of George Washington. The sword is a [illegible] edged blade. The handle is elegantly [illegible] with guard and knot to correspond. The case also representing in the cut was made specially to hold the sword and is a [illegible] by having upon its face a silver plate with this inscription:

To each of my nephews, William Augustine Washington, George Lewis, George Steptoe Washington, Bushrod Washington and Washington I give one of the swords or regimentals which I may die possessed of, and that one to [illegible] they may be pleased. These words are accompanied with an injunction not to unsheath them for the purpose of shedding blood except it be for self defense or in defense of their country and its rights, and in the latter case to keep them unsheathed, and prefer falling with them in their hands to the relinquishment thereof.



WASHINGTON'S SWORD.

The quotation is from Washington's will.

The sword at the death of the man who had worn it fell to Maj. George Lewis. The present owner is Miss Virginia Lewis. Her father, Mr. Henry T. Lewis, wishes to sell the sword to the government of the United States, that it may be purchased by the nation and its identity preserved. I this morning talked with Mr. Lewis and asked him to tell me something of the history of the sword.

"When the five pillars of Washington gathered to select the [illegible] words willed to them," said Mr. Lewis, "William Augustine Washington had the first choice and selected the sword that Frederick the Great of Prussia gave Washington, and [illegible] has been sold with some other articles to the state of New York for $20,000. In 1850 I was offered this same amount for this one. I think if I had been there when the nephews were selecting their swords and had had first choice I would have taken the sword you hold in your hand, for I am not attached to royalty, and the fact that one of the swords came from King Frederick would not have influenced me in the least. I would have inquired only for the sword which was dearest to the hero Washington—the one which hung most often by his side."

The seal was owned and used by Washington in his private correspondence. It now belongs to Mr. Lewis. This gentleman also has a lock of General Washington's hair, his finger bowl and family portraits. As relics of Washington are exceedingly rare this collection is quite valuable.

Senator Evarts recently introduced in the senate a bill directing the secretary of war to purchase this sword. The bill was opposed by Senators Cockrell and Vest and warmly defended by Senators Evarts, Voorhees and Hoar.

Dr. Gosling has patented a new gun metal, composed of steel and aluminum and said to be of remarkable strength.

SOME SPRING POETRY.

MARY JANE INTRODUCES A KITTY WITH RHYMES.

Washington a Paradise of Pinkeys and Green Turf and Blue Skies Something About the Duchess of Calgarry. A Story Told of Hon. Timothy Campbell.

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, May 10. I met Miss Mary Jane the other day and I hastened to congratulate her upon the success of her spring chicken, but if I thought I could be by that act to Cherry Jones redress in Washington the small of her back I would go for whom and also fought as well as that lettuce it to the dust.

I said as much to Jones, and that young woman haughtily remarked that any body who would write spring poetry ought to be taken to the graveyard in a spring wagon. However, she is the poetry, and if some of its touching lines do not find a responsive chord in some body's heart, I'll eat my everybreast.

Red, White and Blue
The sun rose o'er the ocean
Like some great lamp of gold,
Or some big piece of cheese.

Then rose the sun in splendor
And flooded earth from Paradise;
The shadows of the trees
Are just about a mile long.

Hop, hop, hop the grasshoppers
Where daisies dance and golden jewels
Adorn stately tulips bend their heads
To hyacinthine daintiness.

Where violet and asphodel
Their fragrance and their beauty tell;
And here on every branch is found
A young man with his arm around—
A fair young girl? Forsooth, do not
I'll never tell if you don't know.

Ahem, said Dickey with a sinister ... as I read her the lines.

"Well?" said I, a little tartly.

"Oh, nothing," said she, "only when I hear an old maid talking of a young man's arm being around anything it reminds me, don't you know, of 1888 trying to get back into an Eighteenth century almanac."

That was unkind of Dickey, but she would not have said it if I had not hidden her rouge box this morning, and she had to come down to breakfast looking like the pale of civilization.

Speaking of paint, I am reminded of two things, the first of which is a little story.

Long time ago I was among the hills of eastern Kentucky, and one of the adjuncts of my environment in that primitive section was a country store. Nature was, of course, largely in the ascendant among those mountain fastnesses, and I was rejoicing in the thought that here at last I ... society. In the women I was particularly interested, and their old fashioned clothes and their natural manners quite charmed me. One day I was in this store when a brawny, buxom, freckled lass in a bright green sunbonnet and a yellow calico dress came in, and with a smile for the clerk and a questioning female look for me, as the only ... she can't quite account for, she drew confidingly near the ...

"Have you any lady paint?" she inquired.

"Any what?" he said, startled out of his self possession.

"Any lady paint, I said," repeated the girl.

"I don't think we have," he replied, and began to look around his shelves in order to recover his wits.

In a minute or so, with a whisper from me, he had them back again, and in another minute he had fished out a box of ... powder ... which in ... weeks, a ... long wanting a claimant, and handed it to her.

The girl took it with a radiant smile, rubbed a little on her cheeks with her finger, and went away a glittering combination of a trifle of primary colors.

That was away out in the little where nature reigns. Is it surprising, then, that in Washington, where art is supreme, women should worship at the shrine of the prime goddess less than does her sister of the temple?

In the words of the poet, "not hardly," and I am surprised sometimes, painfully surprised, at the hand painted maidens I meet, and matrons, too, more's the pity.

The average girl one meets in Washington is pretty enough without the additions aid of artifice, but she doesn't seem to think so, and she doctors her complexion a good deal more than she doctors the real cause of her completion's need of a doctor. Nor does she do it artistically, though she may think she does, for I have ... and ... commenting upon the "clubs" they have seen in society, and one adventurous young fellow, with nerve and money, suggested to me the organization of a "school of natural art," as he called it, whose object would be the better education of young women in exterior decoration.

Now ain't that a dainty dish to set before the king?

Another young fellow offered to bet a very pretty girl a dozen pair of gloves that she had her complexion made to order at the ... and the girl was afraid to put it to the test. Yet that same girl goes about as pink cheeked as ever, and ... best ... women at their own homes and in the "giddy whirl" who were old enough to be grandmothers, and some of them were, whose cheeks were as red as the blood of healthy youth, and whose shoulders were of alabaster, yet the entire superstructure could have been wiped off with a damp sponge, leaving foundations of—well, leaving foundations of which the least said the soonest mended. With such mothers what other daughters could we expect?

But enough of this. I'm glad I'm not a man, or if I were, that I have arrived at an age when my common sense and my sense of sight and perception are in equipoise.

* * *

If there is any object in human life which commands my sincerest sympathy more than another, it is a bachelor at the age if I may quote the words of a bachelor who has since been redeemed—of "innocuous desuetude." He is the very graveyard of dead hopes, surrounded by the weeping willows of unsatisfied longings, a living monument to undivided sorrow and unshared joys, and I can't help but feel a little lively at seeing his loneliness.

* * *

Dickey and I were strolling along Fourteenth street the other evening, just at that hour when the day is done, and

Save the lights of the village
Gleam through the rain and mist,
And a feeling of sadness comes over me,
That my soul cannot resist;
A feeling of sadness and longing
That is not akin to pain,
And resembles sorrow only
As the mist resembles the rain, and just in front of us, coming from his bachelor quarters on the same street, near P. Senator Saulsbury, of Delaware now past his allotted threescore and ten, was slowly walking under the trees, with his hands behind him, and his thoughts evidently far, far away.

"Dickey," said I, "he's a nice old gentleman."

"Yes," said she, "but he looks dreadful lonesome."

"He's a bachelor," said I, "which he shouldn't be."

"Possibly," said she, "there's a romance in his life."

"There might have been," said I, "but his practical sense should have come to the rescue, and he should have politiced his broken heart with indignation and some other woman for a wife."

"But could he?" she asked, with a lingering suspicion in her voice that broken hearts are incurable.

"Certainly," said I, "and he would be a great deal more comfortable now, with a pleasant home, and woman's gentle ministration, and his youth come back to him in his grandchildren.

He didn't hear us, of course, and he walked on, companionless, lonely, his name and his fame to end with him; his potentiality for good ent squarely in two; a tomb at his feet in which there was room but for one.

The Granger Land and Town Co.

Now Offers For Sale the Entire

Town Site of Granger,

EL PASO COUNTY, COLORADO.

GRANGER is situated on the line of the Denver, Texas & Gulf R. R., about 19 miles northeast of Colorado Springs, in the center of the best Agricultural District in Colorado. The rainfall is sufficient to perfect good crops, and irrigation is entirely unnecessary. All the available land within a radius of twenty-five miles has been taken up by bona fide settlers, and improvements are rapidly being made on all the occupied land.

Granger has one of the best Town Sites in the State. It commands a beautiful view of the surrounding country in every direction. The site is almost perfectly level, with a slight fall to the southeast. Water is obtainable within 10 feet of the surface over the entire Town Site. The streets are 80 feet wide, and the lots are all 50x150, excepting the business lots, which are 25x150 feet. The [illegible] and the [illegible] THE SURVEYED LINE OF THE CHICAGO AND ROCK ISLAND RAILROAD Runs Parallel with that of the DENVER, TEXAS & GULF RAILROAD through the Center of the Town, and forms a Junction with the latter at this point, and will be the Construction Headquarters of Rock Island Extension in Colorado. Granger is destined to become an important town in the near future by reason of its location. It is an Objective Point on the lines of all the Railroads now heading for the Rocky Mountains, and also from the fact that it is located in a Rich Coal Fields Region, where good water is reached at a shallow depth. It is an important Shipping point on the D. T. & G. R. R. for a large section of country. In the matter of business handled Granger ranks third on the line of the road.

The lots will be sold on the popular Allotment Plan, as follows:

PRICE: $25.00 Each.

The drawing for location, due notice of which will be given, will occur not later than June 15th next, and will be conducted by a competent committee selected by the certificate holders. The company will include in the drawing every alternate lot in the entire town site as platted, beginning with lot 1 in each block, reserving only numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 18 and 19 in block 1; number 12 in block 2; numbers 1, 21 and 22 in block 11; numbers 17, 18 and 32 in block 12; numbers 15 and 16 in block 30; number 18 in block 32; number 17 in block 34; numbers 1, 2 and 3 in block 47; and block 28.

All these lots have been sold and deeded. The object in reserving this, each alternate lot throughout the entire plat, and selling the other at the low price of $25, which there is not a lot in the entire site but what is well worth $100 (some of the reserved lots above mentioned [illegible] have been sold at this figure), is to enhance the value of property reserved by inducing the purchasers to build and improve over the entire plat. After the drawing prices will be advanced on lots reserved. Lots will be for sale for only a limited time at the following places:
